Scotland’s national innovation summit names winning SMEs

Three of Scotland’s most innovative small businesses secure a global audience at the virtual event

By Peter A Walker Content Editor
00:01, 21 JAN 2021
Delegates at the inaugural, in-person, event
The three winners of the CAN DO Innovation Summit’s #SME stage competition, open to all small and medium-sized Scottish businesses, have been unveiled.

Edinburgh-based Scene Connect, Aberdeen-based Recycl8 and Edinburgh-based Space Intelligence were chosen from a range of entrants all asked to submit a short video demonstrating how they are building innovation into their daily practices.

Getting a spot on the Summit’s SME stage gives the businesses exposure to a global online audience of more than 800 investors, academics, entrepreneurs and innovators.

The winners will also get two days of support from an innovation specialist at Scottish Enterprise.

This year’s CAN DO Innovation Summit, a headline event of the VentureFest Scotland festival of innovation, will feature a speaker line-up of more than 40 multi-sector SMEs and a range of innovation support agencies, across 12 industry-led panel sessions.

This includes keynote presentations from Lolita Jackson, special advisor for climate policy and programs in New York City’s Mayor’s Office; Ivan McKee, the Scottish Minister for Trade, Investment and Innovation; Craig Foster, art director at Pixar Animation Studios; Chloe Demrovsky, the first female chief executive to oversee and expand the Disaster Recovery Institute’s international network; and John Reid, chief executive of the National Manufacturing Institute Scotland.
Dr Laura Bell, programme lead at the Glasgow City of Science and Innovation, said: “Recent events have created huge challenges for SMEs, who will now be critical to tackling the economic and societal challenges we are facing. Our virtual focal point for business will help SMEs adopt new technologies, build progressive working cultures and access the right support for innovation-led recovery and growth. I’d also like to thank our panel of judges for selecting three excellent winners to take their well-earned place in the spotlight at the Summit on the #SMEstage.”

The competition winners were selected by an independent panel of judges made up of senior representatives from Scottish EDGE, Innovate UK and Scottish Enterprise.

The winners will have their moment in the spotlight at the Summit at 3.45pm on 3 February.

This is the second summit, following an inaugural event in Glasgow, and the first time it has been held virtually.

The lead delivery agency is Glasgow City of Science and Innovation. Core funders for the event are the Scottish Government, Scottish Enterprise, Scottish Funding Council, Glasgow City Council, Innovate UK and KTN.
Scottish Parliament publishes BiFab report, raising serious concerns
World's most expensive whisky set to break records at auction
World's most expensive whisky set to break records at auction

WHISKY
Scottish robotics company hires four and plans to quadruple sales
British Gas engineers to burn 'sign or be fired' contracts

SCOTTISH GAS
Next withdraws from race to snap up Arcadia retail empire
Scotland’s national innovation summit names winning SMEs - Business Insider

https://www.insider.co.uk/news/scotlands-national-innovation-summit-names-23353248
Scotland’s national innovation summit names winning SMEs - Business Insider

Oil field service giant ends “incredibly challenging” year with $15bn losses
33,000 Scottish businesses showing signs of financial distress as Covid-19 restrictions continue

ECONOMY